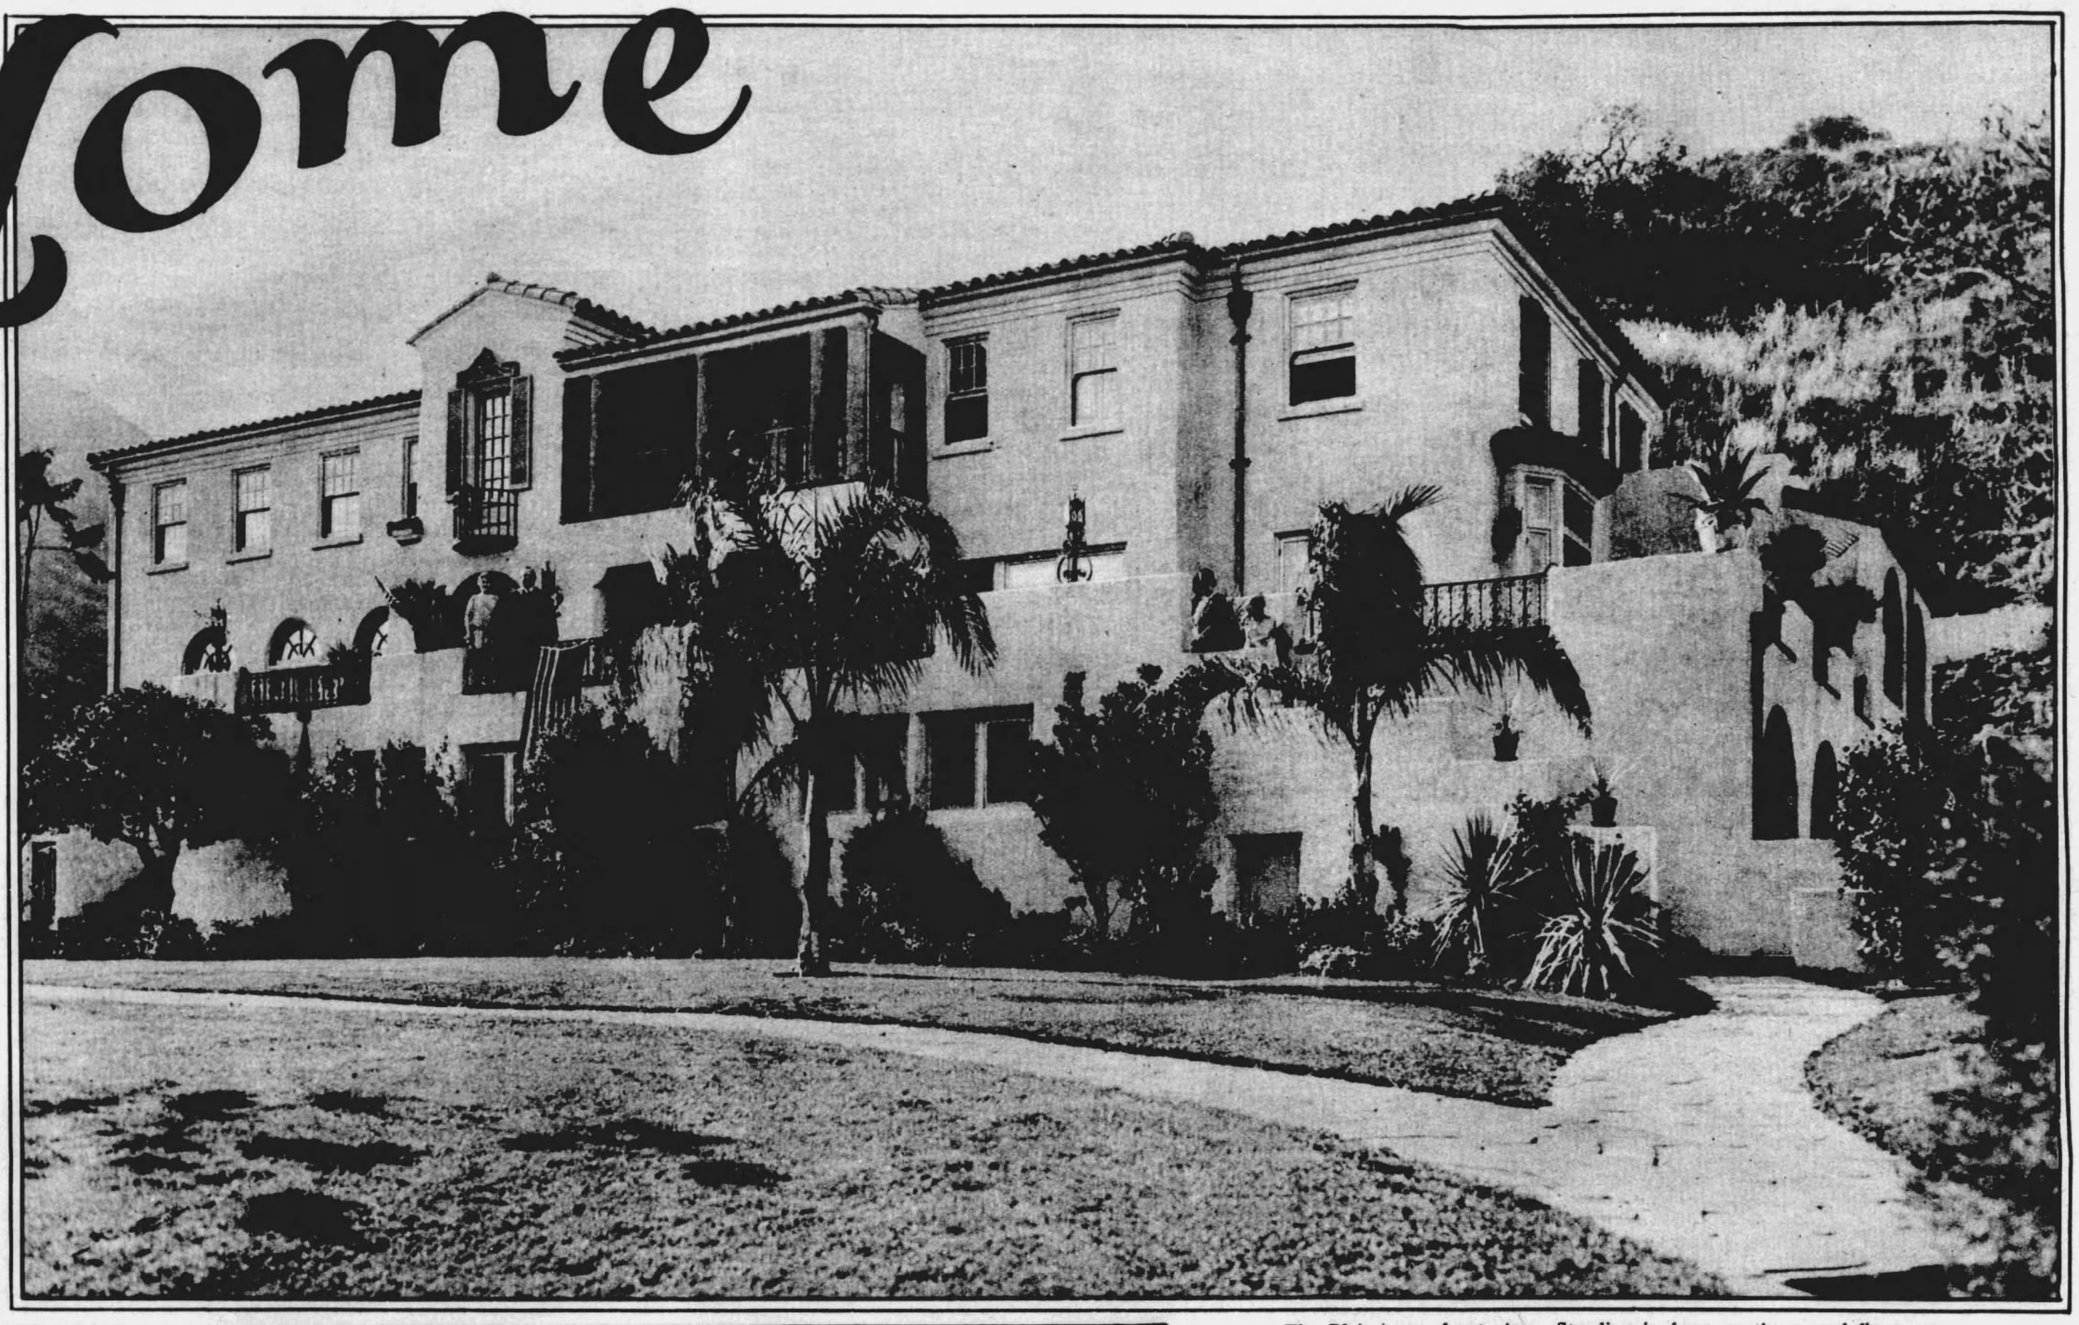
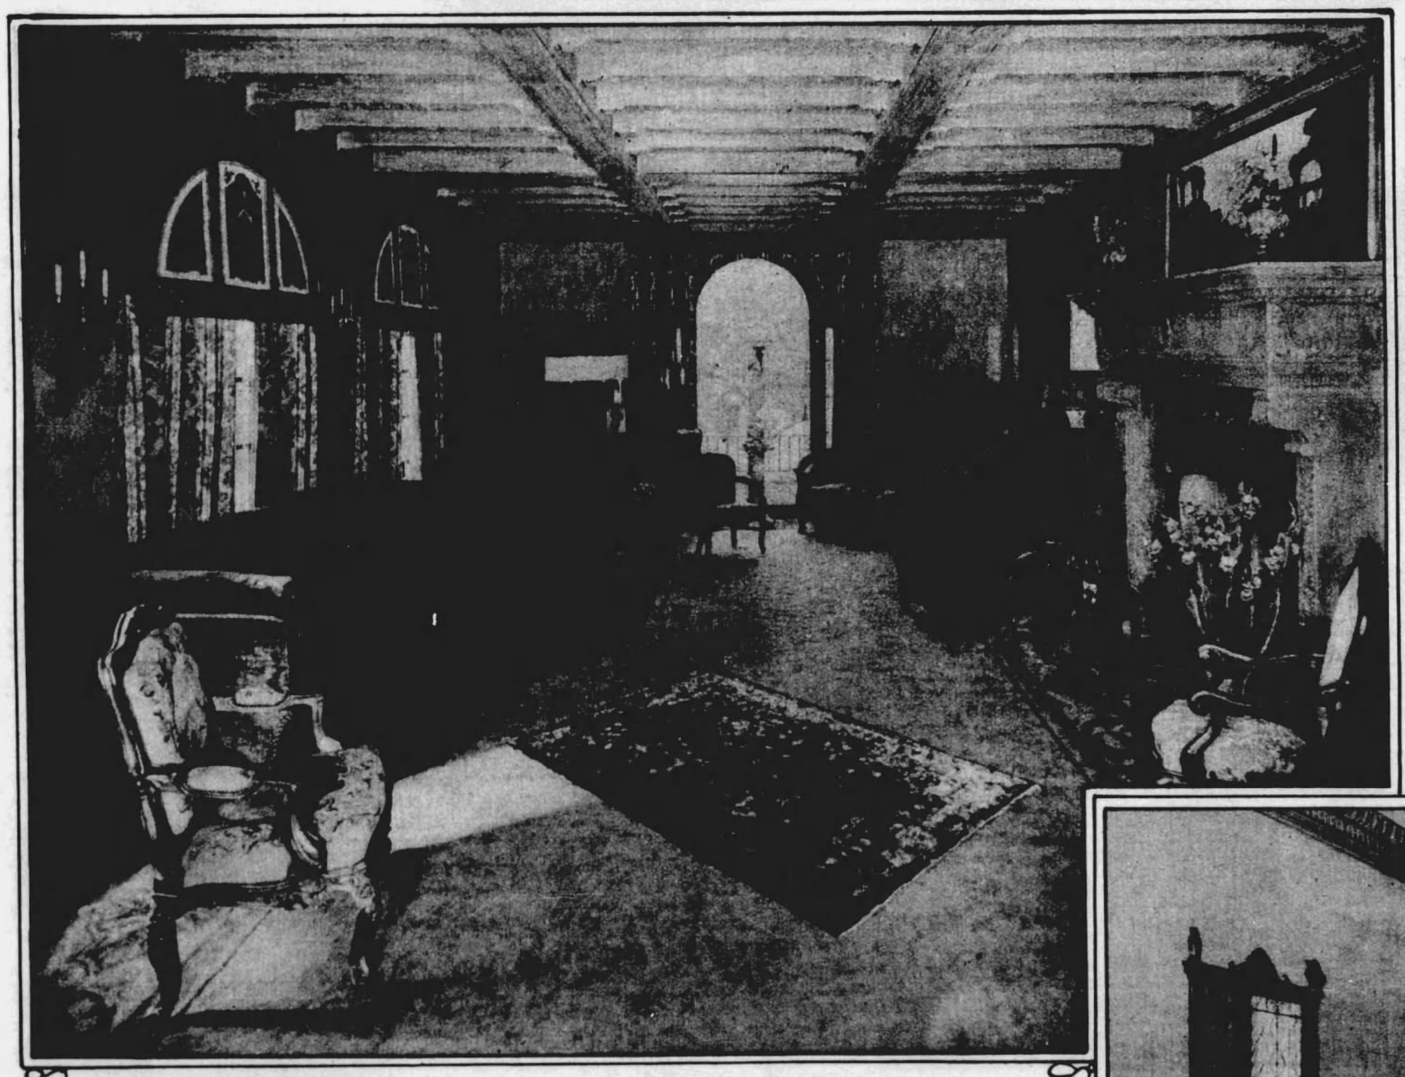
Home

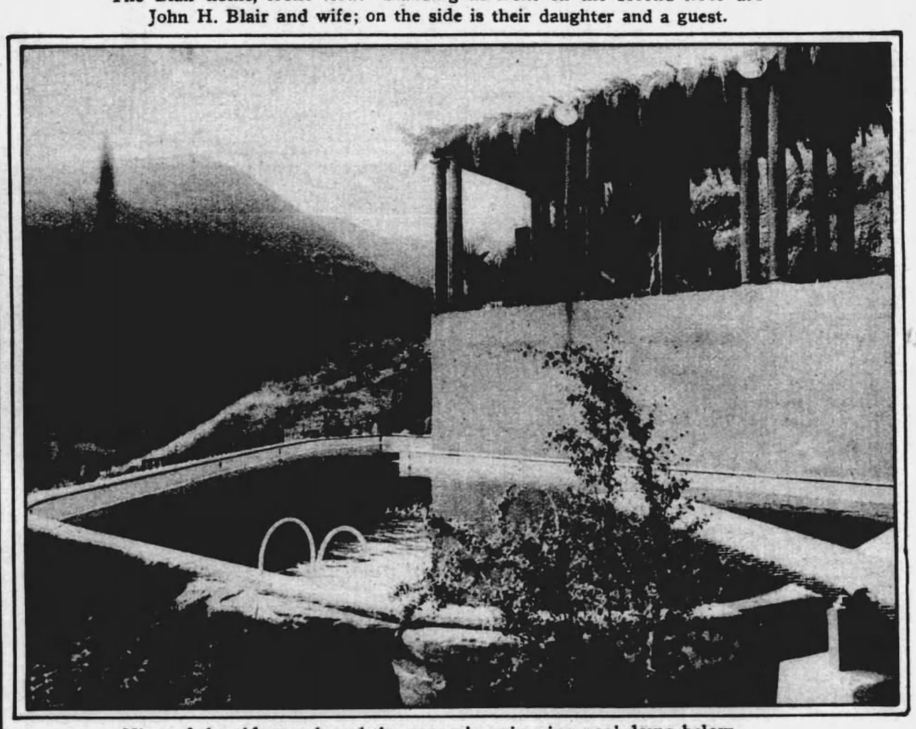
The dearest spot on earth, no matter where, no matter how magnificent, how humble — for everyone either wants a home for himself, or is eager to see the other fellow's home. These pictures depict the beautiful California home of John H. Blair on the side of a mountain, just back of Hollywood. The architect was George H. Fruehling, who formerly lived in Houston.



The Blair home, front view. Standing in front on the second floor are John H. Blair and wife; on the side is their daughter and a guest.



The beautiful living room with an artistic arrangement of the furniture and draperies.



View of the side porch and the open air swimming pool down below, with the mountains in the distance.

View of the dining room. .

Entrance hall and stairway leading to the bedrooms and guest rooms on the second floor.